A program which will be participated in by patriotic organizations of the city, by city departments and by the Sequoia Union High School band has been arranged today in celebration of the anniversary of the signing of the armistice in 1918. The program will begin with a parade from the fire house in the following organizations in the order given: Police Escort, City and County Officials, Department in Uniform, Sequoia High School Band, and Army Men.

Operettas Receive Applause

A capacity crowd filled the Sequoia Union High School auditorium last Saturday night, November 5 for the presentation of four one-act operettas—"Lady Frances," "Freshies," "Heads Off," and "The Nifty Shop." Otis M. Carrington, composer and director of these operettas, received commendation from many who attended for the success of his program.

"Lady Frances," being the first on the program was an operetta portraying the sophistries of present-day co-eds. Marguerite Shearer as Lady Frances, and Vera Clements as Bridget O'Harrigan brought applause from the audience for the almost professional acting of their parts.

"Freshies," following "Lady Frances," was another collegiate operetta cleverly extricating three freshmen from abuse by their older fraternity brothers. Arthur Lampkin as the "first" president Eugene Bone, as a "Mid" student Frank Archibald as a law student Calvin Wells, Harry Gibson and Norman Hollingsworth as foot ball heroes, supported by a chorus of fine voices, made up this highly entertaining operetta which was judged the most popular of the evening.

Marguerite Downs in "The Nifty Shop," was Madame, owner of the shop and portrayed her part to perfection, supported by a chorus of models wearing the latest styles. "Heads Off" concluded the program with a boisterous comedy Sam Enton, the horrible heads man, emitted most weird noises while sleeping in the noble king's throne, and the victim, Frank Archibald, shivered most naturally as the king, Eugene Bone, insisted on an execution.

Directed by Max L. Gelber. Richard Lyman, assistant U. S. District Attorney, and Miss Inez Jamieson, principal Miss Inez Jamieson.

CLAIMS COUNTY CANNOT JOIN ORGANIZATIONS

That county cannot hold membership in any organization as the claim of District Attorney Swart. The matter was brought before the board by the presentation of a claim by the California Development Association for $600 membership dues for the county. "The county cannot join the Masons or the Knights of Columbus," stated Swart, "nor can it hold a membership in any other organization."

Swart stated that all claims to be payable by the county must be itemized, and must set forth in detail what service has been rendered for which the money is demanded. If the California Development Association can show that the money was used for advertising which had been ordered by the board of supervisors, the claim would be legitimate, Swart stated, and would be chargeable to the advertising fund.

Fred Drake, president of the San Mateo County Chamber of Commerce, appeared before the board and urged frugality in regard to the advertising fund which he stated was small and was very necessary to the successful functioning of the chamber of commerce.

TREES AND FENCE WRECKED BY AUTO

While on their way to Watsonville early Monday morning, three young Chinamen, one the driver of the car fell asleep while speeding along the highway through Redwood City. They were awakened from slumber, however, when the car swerved from the highway, knocked over two large palm trees, plowed through about twenty feet of picket fence and almost an equal distance of thick cypress hedge. The car was almost completely demolished by the impact with the various objects which it wrecked on its wild plunge. The occupants, however, escaped without serious injury, except the driver who suffered minor cuts about the face when the wind shield was splintered.

The accident occurred in front of the property of Henry McGarry on the highway, and as a result of the crash McGarry is now minus two trees and considerable fence and hedge.

MEETING WILL BE HELD TO DISCUSS CREEK STREET

A meeting of the citizens of this city will be held at the city hall next Tuesday to take up the proposition of the proposed creek street from Webster to Broadway. The matter is to be finally determined at this gathering. There has been long delays and the time has arrived to make a decision. Some of the property owners along the creek are protesting against the improvement, while others favor it.

It is to be hoped the people of Redwood City will not lose this golden opportunity to improve this section of the city. No to do so will greatly retard the city's growth. It will hamper business and discredit the very best portion of this city. If it is not done now the opportunity to benefit this quarter will be lost for ever, for just as soon as a building goes up on the Munday property there will be no hope of ever going through with the proposed improvement.

The proposed street would cover the creek that has for ages been an eye sore, that has been nauseating to the visitor and a draw back to this fair city. The street would bring a fine business section to the center of Redwood City, make that property valuable, bringing big profits to the land owner.

Not to go on with this improvement would be an everlasting shame to the progressiveness and enterprise of the good people of Redwood City. It would be nothing short of a calamity. Let every property owner and citizen attend the meeting and demand its construction. The benefits from this improvement will be immeasurable. The city needs it. It is absolutely necessary. It would be shortsightedness on the part of the business men to neglect or overlook this meeting. Be there and urge the improvement.

JULES JARA CRUSHED TO DEATH ON WAY BACK WITH PRISONER

When the car in which he was returning to this city with Roy McLean, better known in the county as William Carroll, a prisoner, and John Kentfield of this city, turned over after skidding into a bank, Jules Jara, deputy sheriff, was instantly killed.

Jara and Kentfield had gone in the Jordan touring car of the sheriff's office to San Luis Obispo to get Carroll, who was held there as a prisoner. They had returned only a short distance on their way when in passing a truck, the car which Jara was driving skidded, struck the bank and turned over. Jara was pinned beneath the car and passed away almost instantly. He suffered a crushed chest, broken neck and a broken leg. Kentfield received injuries to one leg which may prove more or less severe. The prisoner, who was in the front seat with Jara received several bad cuts and bruises.

The news of the accident was received at the sheriff's office here, and threw the whole jail force into much concern. Jara was one of the most popular members of the sheriff's staff. Always courteous and obliging, he was a favorite, both with the men with whom he worked and with those whose business took them to the county jail. Immediately upon receipt of the sad news Sheriff McGrath left for San Luis Obispo.

Jara was 50 years of age. He was born in Halfmoon Bay of a pioneer family of that section and had spent practically all of his life in this county. For many years he was a professional musician, but had more recently been a special policeman. In the latter capacity he served the Pacific Portland Cement Co. during the construction of their plant here, and was upon the completion of the plant appointed jailer and later deputy sheriff by the late Sheriff McGovern.

Jara has only one surviving relative, Mrs. Leonora Brown of San Francisco, a sister. Sheriff McGrath returned late last evening with the body which is now at the Mori undertaking parlors at South San Francisco. The funeral will be held from that place tomorrow morning at 9:30 and will be followed by interment in Holy Cross cemetery.

Local Merchants Hear Talk on Consolidation. The work of the bureau of governmental research in making a survey of this and San Francisco counties with special attention to the matter of consolidation of the two counties, was explained to the members of the Redwood City Chamber of Commerce at their weekly luncheon meeting Monday. The speaker was Alfred C. Campion, chief engineer of the bureau.

The chairman of the meeting was Daniel R. Stafford. A number of matters of interest to the merchants were also discussed.

FORMER LOCAL WOMAN DIES IN CLOVERDALE. The news of the passing away of Mrs. Julia Rathbone in Cloverdale last Sunday morning was a shock to her many friends in this city, where she spent the early part of her life. Mrs. Rathbone had been in ill health for a considerable time, and had been in a Cloverdale hospital for the past six months. She passed away there.

Mrs. Rathbone was born and raised in this city. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Christ of this city, her father being for many years town marshal. She grew to womanhood here and married Rev. L. D. Rathbone, at that time pastor of the Congregational church. Rev. Rathbone has for many years been pastor of the Congregational church in Cloverdale, and the family have made their home in that place. Mrs. Rathbone's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Christ, have been making their home with them.

In addition to her parents and husband, Mrs. Rathbone is survived by a son, Ralph Rathbone, a sister, Mrs. Harry Brace of San Francisco, and a brother, George Christ of this city. Another sister, Mrs. F. P. Wentworth of this city, passed away several years ago.

Funeral services were held Tuesday in Cloverdale, where interment took place in the Cloverdale cemetery.

C. OF C. FAVORS NEW FIRE HOUSE. Urging favorable action toward the construction of a proposed new fire house to serve the section west of the highway, a communication addressed to the board of trustees of Redwood City was presented to that body at its meeting Monday by the Redwood City Chamber of Commerce. The matter was taken up with several of the trustees who were present, and they stated that the grammar school was willing to donate a lot of land by the district, but that this location was not favored by the fire department.

The department was finally asked to select a lot which it considered suitable. The suggestion of City Treasurer B. E. Myers that a lot be secured in the South Redwood district for the erection of a third house in the future was also referred to the department for its consideration.

PALO ALTO PASTOR EXCHANGE CLUB SPEAKER. Rev. Bryant Preston, pastor of the Congregational church in Palo Alto, was the speaker at the Tuesday evening meeting of the Redwood City Exchange Club this week. Rev. Preston was connected with the United States air service during the war, but served under a special commission as peace missionary between the various camps at the front. In this capacity it was his duty to visit the American, British, French and Italian camps and straighten out the difficulties and friction naturally resultant from the throwing together of men of different races and countries on the field of battle.

His service during the war, furnished Rev. Preston with an unlimited supply of interesting material for talks such as that given Tuesday, and his address was one of great interest to the Exchange Club.

Ralph Case of the local school department, was chairman of the meeting.

BURLINGAME CITY COUNCIL FAVORS REAPPRAISAL. The city council of Burlingame has taken a definite stand in favor of a scientific reappraisal of the county, and will present their demands in the form of a petition to the board of supervisors at the next meeting of that body. This action by the council was taken Monday night at the regular meeting of that body, and was led by Mayor Totten.

Totten charged that the present assessment of the county is inefficient and ridiculous. In substantiating this statement he said, "The property which is now being used as San Francisco's airport was assessed so low on the county books that when a price for the sale of it was quoted it seemed ridiculous," declared Totten.

"On the other hand, the supervisors recently bought a grove of redwoods for several thousand dollars and the assessment did not even appear on the books."

The council finally went on record as favoring reappraisal of the county, and ordered the city attorney to draw up the necessary petition to be presented to the board of supervisors.

Next Thursday afternoon, at the Redwood City Woman's Club, the play, "The Trysting Place," will be presented, through the courtesy of the students and faculty of Sequoia Union High School. The program will commence at 3 o'clock. Besides the play, there will be several numbers on stringed instruments. There will be a business meeting of the club at 2 o'clock. The hostesses for the afternoon will be Mesdames G. A. Merrill, M. Moulton and J. Heckenborn.

CALIFORNIA NEWS BRIEFS

General good weather throughout California during November, with only a few depressions that will result in showers that will increase in volume toward the Pacific Northwest, is the month's weather prediction issued last week by Father Ricard, "Padre of the Rain" at Santa Clara.

Publication of California's new laws, passed at the 1921 session of the Legislature, has been completed, and the edition of 3,000 volumes was last week being delivered to Secretary of State Frank C. Jordan for public sale. It was announced by State Printer Carroll H. Smith. All legislation for 1921 is set forth in each volume. It was announced, the new statute book totaling 2,525 pages, which contain 85 resolutions and 692 chapters laws. The law-books will be sold at $5 a copy by the Secretary of State.

Steps to obtain a full and accurate tabulation of all California highway accidents, and thus provide a basis for study of the causes of automobile mishaps and means of reducing their number, were announced last week by Frank G. Snook, chief of the state division of motor vehicle accidents. All county traffic squad captains under the proposed plan will be required to report the details of every motor vehicle mishap to the State division.

Asserting that the scenic value of California highways must be protected, Bert B. Meek, State director of public works, announced last week that action is being withheld on applications by oil producing interests to cut through the walls of Ventura highway parapet in approaching State tidal lands where oil drilling is proposed. Meek pointed out the State has spent approximately $500,000 on the parapet which provides a view of the ocean attracting visitors from all over the world.

Premiums paid on workmen's compensation insurance in California during the last twelve years total $148,680,244.61 and during the same period insurance carriers paid $80,037,361.93 to injured workers and their dependents, it was announced last week by John A. McGilvray, director of the State department of industrial relations.

That Trinity County is one of the best regions in the state for deer hunters is shown by the records of last season just compiled in the office of the Trinity National Forest. Hunters registered last season at the various gateways to the forest numbered 3,631. An even 1,000 came into the forest and county at the Tower House entrance, twenty miles northwest of Redding.

California's state fish exchange has no right to fix the price of fish caught in Mexican waters or beyond the three-mile limit of the coast line, Judge Andrews ruled last week in superior court in San Diego in granting an injunction sought by 100 deep-sea fishermen of San Diego port against the state marketing officials. The court overruled a demurrer of the attorney general's office to plaintiffs' cause of action in so far as it would affect jurisdiction of the state on fish caught in foreign waters or from the high seas, and sustained it as applying to fish caught within the three-mile limit.

California is winning the long battle against tuberculosis, it was revealed last week when the State Department of Public Health announced that the "white plague" death rate has been cut almost in half during the last two decades. A comprehensive survey of death statistics shows that the tuberculosis mortality rate in this State was only 14.4 per hundred thousand population during the last year as compared with 221.8 per hundred thousand in 1906.

Big Oak Flat, Tioga and Wawona mountain roads into the Yosemite valley are considered closed for the season it was announced last. Snow had been falling for two days above the 7500-foot elevation. Waterfalls were up to their midspring form and many visitors are entering over the All-year highway from Merced to view the valley. The road is reported in excellent condition.

California leads all the states in the war against crime, declared Richard Washburn Child recently in an address opening the conference of the national crime commission at Washington, of which he is chairman. Missouri, he declared was at the bottom of the list, its "stubborn legislature" having considered its duty done by making it a crime to steal a dog. "In mere bulk of legislation affecting the criminal code, California also easily leads with a record of 283 bills introduced and 86 passed. However, the number passed was largely due to the revision of the criminal code and the work of its standing committee.

The attractions of California make permanent residents out of approximately 40 per cent of the automobile tourists who visit the State each year. This estimate was announced recently by Frank G. Snook, chief of the state division of motor vehicles, on the basis of a check of automobile licenses issued over a number of years. Out of 70,000 temporary permits issued out of State tourists last year, said the announcement, 28,000 were changed into permanent vehicle registrations at the request of motorists desiring to make their homes in California.

Following the discovery that 400,000 motorists in California are without operators' licenses, the State motor vehicle department, Frank G. Snook, chief, has ordered an immediate check of the files to determine the names of motorists driving without cards. It is estimated 25 per cent of the drivers are without licenses.

A citrus survey of Kern county, just completed by the office of the horticultural commissioner, shows that the orange crop is rapidly nearing the time for picking. Inside of two weeks, Whit C. Barber predicts the orange growers will start their harvest.

It is reported that a very fine chute of ore has been discovered on the 1,200-foot level of the Original Mine at Clearinghouse, Mariposa County. Development work is going ahead at the mine on several levels, in most of which excellent ore has been developed. Capitalists have been at the Original recently trying to negotiate for its purchase, but is said the mine is not for sale.

Carr, it was announced last week at the executive offices that the governor has urged his newly appointed Commission on Gas Resources to begin action at once in seeking to reduce the wastage of natural gas in California oil fields.

Young's administration, will have 800 convicts working at wages on California highways by next spring. This was announced last week by Bert B. Meek, state director of public works, who also revealed plans for establishment of a new prison camp next year in the Monterey territory on the Carmel-San Simeon route.

The illegal employment of children in California, if any, will be thoroughly investigated within the next week or so, declared John A. McGilvray, state director of industrial relations. He said: "William A. Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, has stated that child labor has increased approximately 10 per cent in the San Francisco area within the past two years and has increased all over California.

To spread the gospel of conservation and reforestation, California's state government soon will go into the business of "making two trees grow where one grew before." A great state forest of more than 8000 acres, in the virgin hills of Shasta county, now is being plotted for the demonstration and probably will come under state ownership by act of the next legislature. California's present stand of timber totals 208,325,000,000 board feet, or some 16,200,000 acres, Pratt said, but more than 7,600,000 acres already have been cut over. In the cut-over areas, Pratt estimates, there are 5,700,000 acres which will reforest naturally if given proper fire protection, but on the remaining 1,900,000 acres artificial reforestation must be undertaken.

Led by the California State Automobile Association, a million motorists in 927 automobile clubs in 11 western States will fight for elimination of the federal excise tax on motor cars. This announcement was made by President Burton T. Towne of the California State Association. "We will fight every step of the way to eliminate this tax," Burton said. "Last year $66,437,861 was collected from auto owners in a tax purely a war measure. Similar taxes have been eliminated on many other lines. We are urging clubs in the west to secure support of their congressmen in the fight to eliminate this tax.

The prediction that California will send a solid delegation to the next Republican national convention instructed for Secretary Hoover was made last week by Senator Shortridge, Republican, California, upon his return to Washington. "Inasmuch as President Coolidge will not be a candidate," he said "California will send a solid delegation for Herbert Hoover for President.

Figures compiled by the National Association of Supervisors of State Banks showing marked gains in banking resources in the last eight years and indicating "the growing confidence of the people of the United States in state banking systems" were made public last week by Will C. Wood, State superintendent of banks. Resources of State banks, Wood said, have grown from $25,965,000,000 on June 30, 1919, to $40,046,661,000 on June 30, 1921. "The confidence of the people of California in State banking institutions is not misplaced," Wood declared. "The bank act which governs the State banks of California affords exceptional legal safeguards for saving deposits. From July 1, 1913, to June 30, 1921, no savings depositor in the savings departments of California State banks sustained a loss. It is a remarkable record."

WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

Praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Mrs. Annie Kwinski of 535 1st Ave., Milwaukee, Wis., writes that she became so weak and run-down that she was not able to do her housework. She saw the name Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in the paper and said to her husband, "I will try that medicine and see if it will help me." She says she took six bottles and is feeling much better.
Mrs. Mattie Adams, who lives in Downing Street, Brewton, Ala., writes as follows: "A friend recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and since taking it I feel like a different woman."
With her children grown up, the middle-aged woman finds time to do the things she never had time to do before - read the new books, see the new plays, enjoy her grand-children, take an active part in church and civic affairs. Far from being pushed aside by the younger set, she finds a full, rich life of her own. That is, if her health is good.
Thousands of women past fifty say they owe their vigor and health to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and are recommending it to their friends and neighbors.

Too Much Soot

According to reliable estimates, enough soot and dirt float over American cities in one year to bury every street on Manhattan island to a depth of 21 feet. It would form a pyramid 1,500 feet high and five miles across at the base, if gathered into one large mass. These calculations have been prepared on actual measurements of the soot and smoke found in the air at different times of the year and over many different cities. - Popular Mechanics Magazine.

War Is Not All Like This

Keeping American American

URGING the citizens of this country to awake from the lethargic apathy into which so many have fallen in regard to the governmental affairs, Addison P. Munroe, governor general of the Society of the Mayflower Descendants, addressed the members of that society recently.

"Such ills as we have in our government, and we have plenty, are due to the deadly apathetic indifference of our citizens to governmental problems," the governor-general said. "In other words, if the government of the city, state or nation is bad, the citizens themselves are to blame for it."

Munroe believes that all aliens who do not become citizens within a reasonable time after entering this country should be deported to their native lands. He also favors a stricter immigration enforcement.

These are problems which must be met. Which must be met by each citizen as well as by the nation. Agencies who desire cheap labor or who want cheap votes are anxious that this land be thrown open to the undesirables of every country. Active agencies are at work at all times smuggling aliens over the border. These are used as cheap labor, to further anti-American propaganda, become naturalized and swell the foreign vote to which the politicians pander and which in some regions carries the balance of power.

America should welcome the assimilable alien, the man and woman who becomes a loyal and industrious citizen. But should have no place for the lawless, the diseased, the unfit and the moron. The United States can withstand any attack of armed forces or turritid dreadnaught, but it cannot indefinitely withstand the more dangerous invasion from alien shores.

The alien who cannot appreciate our government, who does not respect our laws, who uses the liberty vouchsafed us by our ancestors merely as an opportunity for incendiarism and sedition is a menace to the very freedom which we regard as essentially a part of our government.

The Governor's Awful Sin

HORRORS! Governor Johnson of Oklahoma is a Rosicrucian. So the newspapers throughout the country have proclaimed, and the political enemies of the governor have made the most of the fact. They could have stood for him being an osteopath, a heptagenarian or most anything else, these enemies of the governor—but a Rosicrucian, that would never do. True, few if any of these political investigators and the thousands who felt cold shivers down their backs when the horrid news was told, knew anything of the Rosicrucians, except, of course, that they were in league with the devil. So an effort was made to impeach Governor Johnson.

Dreadful charges were made against the governor. He was alleged to be a student of the stars, and to be interested in the development of the human soul. Awful things these for a man intrusted with the reins of government.

We don't know much about Governor Johnson, but we would rather trust the future of our own state to a man who draws inspiration from the firmament than one whose guiding principles are drawn from the cesspools of political propaganda.

"THE WORST IS YET TO COME" Wellington

SEEK "PAINLESS" TAX FOR STATE REVENUE

SACRAMENTO, Nov. 3—California's revenue molar are in a state of decay, assert the tax dentists, and new tax grinders must be substituted.

But both operations must be painless!

"Painless Taxation" is the objective of Governor Young's new State Tax Commission, headed by Irving Martin, Stockton publisher, but extractions must be guaranteed, for the state government is getting liberally short-changed and is seeking for a tax that is one hundred per cent collectible.

The commission, quite frankly is looking for a tax so widely distributed and so easy of payment that the payee will yield without a struggle. Scouts already have been sent through the eastern states, among them State Controller Ray L. Riley and Professor Harley Lutz of Stanford University, to seek for the elusive painless tax.

The drift thus far trends toward a sales tax on general merchandise, a tax, probably, of about one quarter of one per cent on all sales made by merchants. This would be substituted, it is reported, for the personal property tax, one of the present revenue measures under which the state gets short-changed and knows it.

A sales tax, the tax dentists estimate, would return from 25 to 40 percent greater revenue than the inefficient personal property tax, and would not impose a heavy burden on any individual if one may take the advance notice at face value.

Instead of taxing a merchant on March 1 on the "goods on hand," the state, under the "painless tax," would take its one-quarter, or possibly one-eighth of one per cent on daily sales. With the method now in vogue, it is claimed, the assessor has no means of securing a true inventory of the "goods on hand," and the revenue is small.

While several members of the special tax body are known to favor the sales tax on all merchandise, it is reported that some of the governor's commissioners may stand out for a tax on sales of luxuries only.

The "luxury tax," proponents place tobacco, cosmetics, etc., among the luxuries, although heavy smokers and ladies addicted to make-up include these items among life's necessities.

While the sales tax may meet opposition among the merchants, in the event it is levied, it undoubtedly will be heralded as "good news" by the small home owner and the farmer. The real property owner, it is pointed out, is the only one who can not escape the present personal property tax, which would be abolished under the new proposal. In other words, the merchant will pay more towards government and the farmer and the home owner less.

The merchant desiring to do better than his neighbor, may terminate his tax and estimate his payment on a basis of one quarter of one percent of the total.

The interested taxpayer who would know what the tax will mean to his district can select his county's personal property valuation from the following list of typical counties and then supply the county tax rate, as indicated below. This will disclose the present personal property tax. To determine the sales tax increase the personal property tax total about 25 per cent.

COUNTY, Santa Clara: Personal Property Valuation, $13,099,276; County Rate (inside) $1.72; San Mateo, $3,289,365, $2.48; San Diego, $15,460,080, $3.06; So. Iano, $4,290,060, $1.83; Shasta, $2,388,765, $2.65; Lassen, $3,980,471, $1.72; Marin, $3,193,535, $2.31; Merced, $5,894,335, $2.55; Stanislaus, $8,484,600, $1.80; Placer, $1,479,975, $2.13; Glenn, $2,155,353, $1.58; Colusa, $3,022,160, $1.50.

SACRAMENTO, Nov. 10 — If a feminine hand is not steering the ship of state, many a feminine eye is watching her cut through the trough of debate.

In national affairs there may yet be a "Hoover Kitchen Cabinet," but California already has a "Young Kitchen Cabinet."

It all arose out of Governor Young instituting a policy of "open covenants openly arrived at."

which meant briefly "public" cabinet meetings. And finding the door open and being curious to know the "how" of government, the woman stepped in.

Now every time the nine department directors gather about the governor's desk to discuss weighty matters of state, there is a quiet group of interested "citizenesses," as the French would say, "listening in."

The women's group is distinctly a "silent" partner in the cabinet meetings from the "First Lady" down. They never say a word whatever thoughts may be going on under their velvet hats and marcel waves. Not a whisper escapes them no matter what interesting matter is sprung. With a reserve of dignity the women leave that to the "newspaper gang."

Not a sound but the scratching of pencils as the club women "take notes." For they have "constituents" too, to represent. Mrs. W. W. Green, president of the California Federation, an attentive auditor, has 75,000 women electors to "keep informed."

The Governor's cabinet, broadcast Mrs. W. F. Wray of Davis, state chairman of legislation in the club federation, is an historical incident, a momentous step in state government taken with the desire for increasing efficiency.

Democracy met royalty at the capital this week, and neither appeared to be worse for rubbing shoulders with each other.

Thousands of visitors stream through the gubernatorial offices, under the Young "open door policy" of making everybody welcome. But it isn't every day that a prince of royal blood knocks at the executive door.

Greeting Prince William of Sweden, now on a lecture tour of America, Governor Young declared he honored him not only as a "prince and official representative of Sweden, but also as a self-made man, who had earned a high place in science and literature with his explorations and books."

Of what material are heroes made? A brave lad, young Carlton Ball of Jackson, in the solitude of the woods with no audience to applaud, risked his life to save two women from drowning.

He was granted a national medal for his heroism. And Fred Stevenot, genial but bashful director of natural resources, was called upon to bestow it last Sunday.

Pleased to honor the lad but timid about his own eloquence, Stevenot remarked as he scaled the platform, "I deserve a medal for daring to face this audience."

BELMONT HOSPITAL, ENDOWED AS MEMORIAL

Charles S. Howard, head of the Howard Automobile Company, known as the largest distributor of automobiles in the world, believes in sharing part of his profits with those who are not so fortunate. He has endowed a hospital for tubercular diseases in Belmont, at a cost of nearly $200,000, and has also built and fully paid for an up-to-date hospital at Willits, with a free clinic for the unable to pay, as well as accommodations for the general use of those afflicted. This was erected in memory of his son, Frank, who was accidentally killed some time ago.

When Men are Free

City D. Lawrence Hawthorne

True liberty must come through education—
The freedom of an independent mind.
To legislate a democratic nation
Will never loose the chains from humankind.
The laws of men can only grant permission
That all may tread the path of life secure
From scourge, but each must better his condition
Through knowledge, whose release alone is sure.

To be set free from physical oppression
Gives meager promise of those better things
Which constitute life's only great possession:
The liberty that education brings.
Until men learn to heed the laws of nature,
And school themselves to act in close accord
With God's design, no state or legislature
Can guarantee them freedom's rich reward!

True freedom comes alone through education!
When men begin to realize this truth
Then will they give profound consideration
To how they best may spend the years of youth.
That day will see a renaissance of beauty,
And culture will again bring glad release
From strife; refinement then will be a duty;
And men will dwell in brotherhood and peace!

Mayor Beeger Issues Red Cross Proclamation

In a formal proclamation issued today Mayor Henry Beeger has asked all citizens of Redwood City to renew their allegiance to the American Red Cross during the Eleventh Annual Roll Call for members which opens today and will continue through Thanksgiving.

Mayor Beeger points out that the relief organization is out for 5,000,000 members this year, an increase in the enrollment of nearly 2,000,000 over last year's figure. His proclamation, in part, reads:

"The American Red Cross" is today opening its Eleventh Annual Roll Call for members, summing the people of this country to enlist in its ranks so that each may share in the advancement of its work both at home and in foreign lands.

"Membership in this great humanitarian army should be considered a privilege and an obligation. The most democratic organization in the world, the Red Cross, is dependent for its very existence, upon the support it receives from the rank and file of the people who, at roll call time, pay their dues and receive the certificate membership.

"Those dues, offered by the rich and poor alike, from a fund which enables the Red Cross to go immediately into action when a tornado strikes or when a Mississippi flood drives thousands from their homes.

"It enables the United States to play the roll of philanthropist among nations. Countries poorer than ours, crushed by disaster, are helped by your dues and mine, and international bonds of friendship are welded that surely must lessen the danger of war.

"I strongly urge every man, woman and child in this community to become members of the Red Cross during the present roll call. Our local chapter is counting on enlisting 1,500 members at least, and when the campaign is ended, if we go over the top, it will be a great personal satisfaction to me and a satisfaction to Redwood City to know that we have played our part in boosting the membership of the national Red Cross to a figure it certainly deserves to attain."

H. A. BEEGER,
Mayor Redwood City

S. P. TO EQUIP SIX NEW DINERS WITH ROLLER BEARINGS

Equipped with the first roller bearings to be used by any Pacific Coast railroad, six new 77-foot steel dining cars, costing approximately $60,000 each, will be placed in service by Southern Pacific during December, according to F. W. Mahl, general purchasing agent for the company.

"The new cars," Mahl said, "are the finest and most costly yet built for service in the West. As a trial of the desirability of roller bearings under the conditions of western railroad travel, we are employing three different types of bearings, each type being fitted to two cars.

"We are trying out the roller bearing thoroughly, in order to assure continuance of western leadership in travel comfort and safety."

Finished throughout in Cuban mahogany, the interior decorations of the new cars will be typically western in spirit, the golden poppy furnishing the motif. Chairs are to be upholstered in Spanish leather and the cars will accommodate 36 persons at a sitting.

RIGHT - OF - WAY LAW EXPLAINED

The California State Automobile Association has just been notified by Frank G. Snook, chief of the Division of Motor Vehicles, to warn its members to carefully observe the right-of-way rule, as a campaign of education and enforcement of this rule will be pushed this month.

The California Public Safety Conference points out that the violation of this rule is the cause of a large proportion of the collisions which occur at street intersections. D. V. Nicholson, manager of the Public Safety Department of the California State Automobile Association says: "The object of the right of way rule is to avoid collisions at street intersections. This object can be attained if one driver will yield to the other whenever there is danger of a collision. There should be no spitting hair with this rule, as a slight uncertainty may result disastrously. It is the duty of the operator on the left to yield to the operator on the right, when the two are approaching the intersection at about the same time. This means a such time that if both proceed a collision will occur."

"Many drivers think the right of way means the right to a street intersection. This is a misconception. The law, so long as the vehicle is in the intersection, and will collide unless one yields to the other, the driver on the left must yield."

Arrests will be made of who fail to yield, and parties when collisions result.

"Redwood City Preferred"--

YOU'RE a STOCKHOLDER-- HELP YOURSELF TO INTEREST

THE FACT that you live in Redwood City—makes you a stockholder in Redwood City. This is true whether you own property or pay rent—whether you're in business for yourself or lend your efforts and energies to another business—whether you are active or passive.

What would you think of a stockholder in any business that let his coupons go unclipped—that was vitally enough interested to be a stockholder, and not vitally enough interested to further the cause in every possible way he could.

Yet—that's just the situation—unless you do your best for Redwood City—(paradoxically you collect interest by lending interest—and you cannot avoid being a stockholder.)

Therefore it's obvious how much you benefit by giving Redwood City your best—how directly your interests are Redwood City's—and vice versa.

That most citizens are serving is evidenced by the definite progress Redwood City is making. That Redwood City will progress that much more rapidly if every citizen will lend his best—so that he may in turn collect greater return—is evident.

So this is our plea for your co-operation—trade at home—boost for Redwood City—help the other fellow so that he may better help you.

Transatlantic Liners Have Complete Telephone Systems Connected with Land Lines While Vessels are in Port was fifteen minutes before the last good-byes were said. Visitors were hastening to the gang plank. The ship was crowded with people bidding their farewells to their friends on board. The big ship was almost ready to sail.

Among the passengers on the Conte Biancamano, about 150 New York pier for a Mediterranean cruise, was a man from a western state, in the midst of the activity ashore incident to the departure of the Atlantic liner, he made a surprising discovery that he had some travelers checks behind him. He was on the point of leaving the boat to the pier, where the office several blocks away, a deferential official of the bank led him to a telephone in the anteroom adjoining the drawing room. Five minutes later, he was in communication with his office in the western state, and before he sailed, he had been made to forward forgotten checks to his hotel.

friends off. Oftentimes a telephone call received the last minute by the passenger about to set off for distant lands serves as a palliative for the disappointment felt at the failure of the friend to be present and say good-bye in person, owing to social engagements, or other causes. Then again, like the case of the mid-west millionaire, emergencies sometimes arise at the last minute that can be met only by the telephone, and if a passenger has to get off a ship and make the call from land, there is always the fear on his part and the danger of his missing the boat.

These ship telephones are connected immediately when a ship docks and are not disconnected until the gang plank is being pulled in and the steamer is about to set sail. Many a return passenger has received his first word from home in this way, through the telephone, Long Distance calls having been placed so as to be put through just as soon as the ship is tied up at her pier.

While these ship telephones are a great boon to the traveler, they are also of very great value to the personnel of the ship, for the officers and men on the ship form very much the basis of a business organization, and while the steamer is in port, there are a great many contacts to be made in regard to the provisioning of the vessel, etc., which can only be handled satisfactorily by an adequate system of communications.

Sea-Going Telephones

The Leviathan is a typical example of a ship with the finest modern telephone facilities. The staterooms, as well as the officers' quarters, the engine room and the other operating parts of the vessel, are provided with telephones, the total number of instruments being 680. The Leviathan is provided with standard Western Electric equipment, including a private branch exchange switchboard. From a terminal box on the pier, a flexible cable extends to another terminal box aboard the ship.

carrying the circuits to the ship's switchboard. In the case of the Leviathan, this flexible cable connects the big liner by twelve trunk circuits, and through that switchboard any telephone in the United States or Canada connected with the Bell System can be reached. Not all the big liners have a special switchboard, but in cases where there is no switchboard, the cable is connected direct with telephone extensions on the ship.

If someone desires to talk to a departing passenger it may be done by calling up the passenger department of the steamship line, or if one knows the number of the pier whence the steamship is sailing, time can be saved by calling up the pier which is listed in the telephone book under the steamship line.

Not only is the modern ocean liner equipped with telephones so that travelers may talk with friends ashore when the vessel is in port, but they also possess a noteworthy intercommunicating telephone system on the ship itself. For example, take the newly built Malolo which is Hawaiian for "flying fish" and which is the largest high-powered ship ever built in an American shipyard. It was built in an eastern shipyard for service between San Francisco and Honolulu and has a total of 323 telephones, each stateroom having its own private telephone. Provision is made for communication to any part of the ship, the equipment provided being equal to that generally used in a town of approximately 3,000 inhabitants.

The operators in the central offices in New York City which serve the piers where the transatlantic liners dock have their troubles in trying to understand some of the foreigners who use the telephone upon their arrival in this country, but they have gradually come to be adept in learning to interpret the broken English and the dialects of natives of other countries.

THEY'RE IN THE NAVY NOW
Uncle Sam also finds the telephone of very great value in the equipment of his Navy. It seems a far cry from the Bonhomme Richard, the original American man-of-war which was commanded by John Paul Jones in 1779, to the super-dreadnaught of today, for, on September 23, 1779, when the British, frigate Scorpion was captured, all the hardy seamen had to do to order "all hands to quarters" was to blow a call on his little metal pipe, and follow it up with a lusty shout, down the main hatch.

The battleships of the United States Navy today are so large, that it would take several minutes to sound a call in every part of the ship, but by the communication system, which has been developed, such a call can be made as effectively and can reach all hands as quickly as in the days of John Paul Jones and the little metal pipe.

The first American battleship to be equipped with telephones and loud speakers was the Arizona. This was in 1916 and the results were so encouraging that all subsequent large ships have been so equipped. At that time loud speaker construction was in its infancy.

The super-dreadnaught West Virginia affords an excellent example of the telephone communication system in our Navy. This ship has 100 loud speakers so placed that every part of the vessel is within ear-shot of the commanding officer's orders. The system is divided into five circuits which can be operated singly or altogether, and there are three "talking stations," one on the bridge for use while at sea, another on the main deck aft for use while in port, and the third in the ship control room for use during target practice or battle.

The West Virginia and others of the newer battleships also have telephone systems that connect all parts of the ship so that when the dreadnaught is in dock, a special cable connects the switchboard with the telephone system of the country, with the result that much official business is accomplished over its wires.

October Largest Export Month in Nash History

October was the biggest export month in the history of The Motors Company, more cars being shipped to overseas during the past month than any other single preceding month in the eleven years since the company was organized. Shipments for export last month were 82% above those of 1926.

The indorsement of the three series of Nash cars introduced last summer comes from all parts of the world," said H. M. Berry, manager of export sales for the Motors Company. "As the United States automobile industry abroad have been outspoken in their enthusiasm over the appearance and performance of the Advanced Six, Special Six and Standard Six models. And the fact that every model in the Nash line is equipped with a 7-bearing crankshaft motor we feel is responsible, in large measure, for the unusual performance of these cars and their consequent public favor.

"During October, Nash export shipments exceeded by over 38% overseas shipments by The Nash Motors Company for the entire calendar year 1927. For the initial eleven months of the 1927 fiscal year, Nash export shipments exceeded by 24 2-3 Nash overseas shipments for the entire preceding fiscal year. Our export shipments of Nash cars for the 1927 fiscal year will exceed those for the combined fiscal years 1922, 1923, 1924 and 1925."

St. Carmel Property Was Grant of Hawes

To settle a long standing controversy as to who donated the property for the Mount Carmel church, the Hawes or Sidney M. Mezes, representative of the Times-Gazette investigated the matter by consulting the records in county recorder's office. On November 19, 1859, Sidney M. Mezes gave a parcel of land to the church from the present courthouse, to California square and in the same block where A. D. Walsh gave his home to Archbishop J. S. many for the construction of the Catholic citizens here at the time began raising funds for the building, but evidently did not complete their plans as the church was not erected until 1866 when the present site was donated by Horace Hawes to the archbishop. The land donated consisted of a strip from the railroad to the state highway on Brewster street. A portion of the property was sold some years ago to the Southern Pacific railroad company. The property given by Mezes was sold by the church. Both Hawes and Mezes were progressive, enterprising and generous men who gave freely of their vast landed interest to public use. The land on which the court house stands was given to the people by Mezes.

PENINSULA LEADS IN SUNSHINE

At a meeting of the board of directors of the San Mateo County Chamber of Commerce held Monday morning in the courthouse in Redwood City, Manager Wyatt reported that in preparing the text of the County Folder which is in a few days to be upon the press, a question had been raised as to the possibility of error in the following climatic chart compiled several years ago and some of the supporting records of which were destroyed with other files of the United States Weather Bureau, in the San Francisco fire of 1906. The chart which needed verification is given herewith:

Peninsula—26 years averaged, 43 rainy days; 132 Cloudy Days; 233 Clear Days.

Los Angeles—37 years averaged, 41 Rainy Days; 173 Cloudy Days; 198 Clear Days.

San Diego—45 years averaged, 48 Rainy Days; 144 Cloudy Days; and 213 Clear Days.

Manager Wyatt reported that with the approval of the president of the County Chamber of Commerce, Fred H. Drake, who likewise wanted to know the exact truth, though he refused to believe there could be an error in the above chart, he had personally reviewed and copied the reports of every day over a period of five years, beginning January 1, 1927, and ending December 31, 1931, with the result that the above climatic chart is in his estimation fully justified. For purposes of comparison, Mr. Wyatt compiled the records for Los Angeles, Menlo Park and San Mateo through this five-year period and presented to the board of directors of the County Chamber of Commerce at their meeting this week the following five year climatic chart:

San Mateo—annual average, 61 rainy days; 151 Cloudy Days; and 214 Clear Days.

Menlo Park—annual average, 41 rainy days; 136 Cloudy Days; and 223 Clear Days.

Los Angeles—annual average, 48 Rainy Days; 188 Cloudy Days; and 176 Clear Days.

An edition of fifty thousand county folders will be distributed in response to requests for information about San Mateo county, and an exhibit headquarters in San Francisco and Los Angeles as well as throughout the East and Middle West. They will also be available for citizens of this county to mail to prospective citizens.

City May Construct Highway Underpass

The project of the construction of an underpass beneath the highway at James street was given some consideration by the board of trustees Monday evening. The crowded condition of the highway, and the fact that the opening of the new school on Duane street will make it necessary for many small children to cross the highway several times a day, make some provision for their safety imperative. An underpass at James street would serve the needs of the children from the new school as well as the high school children who must cross the highway. An estimate on the cost of the underpass is to be made by City Engineer Dimmitt and will be presented to the board at its next meeting.

The Ravenswood Improvement Club will hold a whist card party tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock in the Ravenswood School on Donohoe street. All are invited. Admission 25c.

U. S. CITIES OUTSTRIP ENGLISH NAMESAKES

Number of Telephones Serves as Index of Relative Progress on Both Sides

Colonists and pioneers, when founding a township in a new country, frequently give it the name of their native town in the old country. As a result, America and Canada are full of cities and towns bearing the same names as old English cities and towns. Sometimes a small village in this country will have the name of some great capital in Europe, but more often the new settlement has grown into a thriving city while the old world market town or village after which it was named has remained stationary in population.

As an index of the latter process, it is interesting to compare the number of telephones in two cities or towns with the same name. The fact that Boston, Mass., has more than 700 times as many telephones as Boston, Lincolnshire, in England indicates the relative growth of the two cities. So Lincoln, Nebraska, has more than ten times the number of telephones in Lincoln, Lincolnshire, and many other instances might be cited.

On the other side, of course, London, England, has more than 30 times as many telephones as London, Ontario, and Manchester, N. H., has not yet caught up with its great namesake in Lancashire.

HIGH ALUMNI HOMECOMING ENJOYED

A Sequoia High School alumni group of approximately one hundred, made up both young and old, danced in the soft lights of the school library on Saturday, November 5. The operettas given by Mr. Carrington's songsters entertained the graduates in the early part of the evening and from the auditorium they adjourned to the library where the strains of dance music greeted them. Dancing was continued until twelve o'clock by which time all had renewed school time friendships.

The pictures of graduating classes, which were placed around the library, were enjoyed by those present. This affair was a homecoming for the Sequoia alumni and possibly a starter for a more active association.

The orthophonic victrola which furnished the music for dancing was loaned to the alumni by Whiting's Music Shoppe. Beatrice Clyne, commissioner of publicity at the high school, handled the advertising and publicity for the alumni.

H. C. Finkler Protests Contractors Payment

Alleging that his property and fences had been damaged by the Cavanaugh Construction Co. during the widening of the West Union road above the Canyon Sanatorium, H. C. Finkler filed with the board of supervisors Monday a protest against the final payment of the contractor. County Engineer George Kneese was called upon for an opinion, and stated that the work of the Cavanaugh Construction Co. had been very lax and unsatisfactory. It was finally decided that the complaint of Finkler should be referred to the contractor.

Local Department Aids In Palo Alto Fire

The local fire department went to the assistance of the Palo Alto firemen Sunday morning when the DeLuxe hall, a large frame building with stores underneath, burned. The fire was one of the largest with which Peninsula departments have had to combat in recent years, and for a time threatened a large portion of the Palo Alto business section. Chief Ryan, Bob Bell, Bert Werder and his son, Ernest Werder went with the pumping engine. The Menlo Park and Mayfield departments were also called upon for help.

High School NOTES

Tonight the boys' council is giving a party in the library. The members of both councils whose respective advisors are Donald Bogie and Miss Catherine Boyle, will attend.

Today, Armistice Day is being observed at Sequoia by a holiday. National Education week was also observed this past week by members of the faculty who have written a story daily for a local paper on some particular phase of education.

Mrs. Balcomb's public speaking class presented an Armistice Day program during the regular assembly yesterday.

Last night, the annual girls' Jinx took place in the gymnasium, upper class girls masquerading as boys, took lower class girls.

Miss Irene Bradley, head of the Sequoia girls' physical education department, has received a letter from the chairman of girls' physical education department of Woodrow Wilson High School in Long Beach, requesting any material on Sequoia's athletic organization and the plans for competition in detail. The chairman was very interested in the report of this work given in the last Physical Education Newsletter.

"Mimographed sheets concerning Sequoia Girls' Athletics will be sent to all schools requesting them," says Miss Bradley.

Wednesday noon, the junior class rings arrived. These rings are the second class rings to have the new Sequia Seal on them.

During the Tuesday half hour period, November 15, the lectures to be given are:

Freshmen—Service Point System and Awards. Mr. Bogie.

Sophomores—Loyalty. Mrs. Kalenborn.

Juniors—Manners and Conduct at Games. Miss Boyle.

Seniors—Faith. Mrs. Kalenborn.

Illustrative of the spirit of service in the Bell System, when the Methodist Church first at North Adams, Mass., recently broke out, no less than twenty-nine local operators called the central office voluntarily to ask if their services were needed. Thousands of calls in regard to the fire were answered while the conflagration was under way.

Green Team Causes Poor Football Showing

Out of the total of eight games played, a survey of the recent football season at S. U. H. S. shows that the local eleven won one, tied two and lost five games. Several circumstances united to cause this showing.

In the first place, three of the Peninsula Athletic League teams were unusually strong this season, while almost the entire Cherokee squad was composed of men who had never played in a game of football. Only two veterans of last season were available and their value minimized by late registration and illness. Another factor was that Spring practice was under one coach, while the playing season was handled by a new man, not acquainted with the boys.

With the season only two months long, a green team, and a new coach introducing his system, a winning team for this year was out of the question.

Accomplishments in the way of building for the future, however, are an important part of the season. Sixty fellows have turned out for the entire season a record for the school.

In addition to the Varsity games, the second team and the 130 pounders have played a regular schedule. The 120's winning their Diamond "C". At the present time some 60 boys are practicing for the first interclass football series which the school has held.

Among the prospects for the next year are Dans, Hamilton, Litner and Schweikert of this year's regulars, together with the Clancy brothers, Chilcott, Maxon, Hansen, Mitchell, Guinasso, Parlee, Silva, Wolfe, Sutton, Dickinson, Cleland and Worrell from this season's records.

With this material and a good stiff Spring practice featuring tackling, blocking and line play, the Cherokee next Fall should be a real menace to the other grid teams of the Peninsula League.

Motor vehicles in the United States consumed 9,788,983,560 gallons of gasoline last year, according to figures issued by the California State Automobile Association.

"A good lead dog has an extra sense—instinct for a trail. Castor has it; that's why he's our lead dog. He has brains, too."

"Where's Shot?"

"Oh, he's following the shore. If he misses us, he'll circle and get our scent."

"Won't he bark?"

"No, he was taught not to—at night. But I must make a decision."

"A decision?"

"We're near the mouth of the Kapiakau. It's going to be slow work—can you stand this till daylight?"

"What has that to do with the Kapiakau?"

"If you're tired—too tired to go on, we can stop at the post. She caught a note almost of appeal in his voice."

"Too tired," she protested, "an army nurse tired when there's a patient to take care of?"

"I know, but it's a bit dangerous, too," he said doubtfully. "Of course—"

"—I'll keep on—for his sake."

"Well, we'll keep on. It means making Elkwan hours sooner, doesn't it? And that counts. I can sleep on this sled. I'm almost asleep now."

"Thank you, Soldier!" he said, and stopped the team while he consulted his compass. "If I could only see that shore—the boulders."

Guthrie left the sled, and fastening a long rawhide thong to Castor's collar, cried, "Haw, Castor! We're going ashore to see if we can stumble into those boulders."

But leading his team and at intervals stopping to examine the ice from his knees, to Guthrie's surprise dogs traveled many hundred yards without reaching the drift and the shell ice of the shore. Was he deep in the mouth of the Kapiakau? And off shore?

He had been too careful to have drifted toward Akimiki, yet he had traveled a mile straight into the shore without hitting it. The only possible solution was the wide mouth of the Kapiakau—and he had wished to avoid getting into the river—had hoped to pass well outside. Swinging the team into the northwest, he decided to travel by compass for another mile. That would bring him into the north shore, if he were inside the river mouth. It would also—

He looked toward the invisible figure on the sled—the girl who had unceremoniously placed herself in his hands—who had entered on this voyage of mercy, thoughtfulness of self. The hands inside his mittens shut convulsively, as a warning Elkwan had once given him flashed across his memory. And he had brought her—the thing most precious in the world to Guthrie—into this. Why had he not camped on the Big Willow?

For minutes Guthrie walked ahead of his team, praying for signs in the ice—a gray blur at his feet—the proximity of the shore. Then—desperate, he stood on the tail of the sled and urged his dogs into a trot, as he checked them from circling with the luminous dial he held in his mittens. For a space Castor gingerly led the team into the black wall when through the murk showed a brittle bark.

Aroused, the yelping hunkies quickened their pace.

"Shot's found the shore—he smells something," cried Guthrie to the girl in front of him. "Queer, he barked, though!"

They had not traveled a hundred yards when, directly in front of the invisible team, sounded Shot's raw challenge. There was an impact of hard bodies, Castor's snarl of rage, Pollux's roar, followed by the belated hunkies fighting. Into the melee of enraged dogs tangled in their traces slid the sled. With the handle of his heavy dog-rod clubbed, the bewildered Guthrie ran to the rescue of the alreale, who for some inexplicable reason had attacked Castor.

At last, taking a slash which ripped the sleeve of his parka as he reached in, Guthrie got Shot's collar with one hand and lifting the struggling dog while he clubbed the others back, dragged him from the milling team. Attempting to follow, Castor fell stumped by a blow on the skull, and Guthrie was free from the infuriated team, unable, enmeshed in their traces, to drag the sled in pursuit of the alreale who fought in Guthrie's arms to return to the battle.

"Oh, what has happened?" called Joan Quarrier's frightened voice. "It was too awful. What started them?"

"It's all right. I've got Shot and he's not cut much. He'll cool off in a minute. For some reason he piled in to Castor."

"I'll straighten out the dogs now. They don't care for this whip-handle."

"I could hear the blows," she said. "It hurt, but I suppose it was the only way."

"They'd have killed Shot, if they once got him down. I had to get him out of it quickly," Guthrie explained, and calming his excited dogs, soon had them on their feet with straightened traces. Castor, Guthrie's favorite, who had taken the bulk of the blows, found the hand of his master with his tongue as he rubbed against Guthrie's leg. Guthrie rumbled the erect ears of the trembling Ungava.

"Poor old boy! It wasn't your fault, was it, if Shot went crazy? Don't blame you a bit, old man. I had to do it, but it's forgotten, isn't it? Yes, good old Castor!" With a pat of the massive skull, Guthrie went to soothe the still excited Pollux, and the rest. But all the while his brain was busy with the strange action of the alreale.

With Shot lashed to the tail of the sled, and the best of the combat life of a brave man. Why think of ourselves?

In the lee of the sled, tipped on its side, its canvas cover stretched above her like a shed tent to reflect the heat of the fire, Joan Quarrier slept, warm in her robes, until waked by the cracking of the fire at dawn.

"Marche, Castor!"

As the sled started, the alreale broke into furious barking. Puzzled,

Guthrie turned back. "What's the matter, Shot?"

The dog was clearly excited about something. With a whimper he rose on his hind legs and pawed the man's chest in dumb attempt to communicate the reason for his protest.

"What is it, old boy? What's ever on that shore you don't want us to see?"

"Tell me, Shot," called the girl, and the dog left Guthrie to go to her but was stopped by his leash.

"It's more than queer," said Guthrie. "It's uncanny. Well, I've got to find that shore to make a fresh start. Now, Shot, be quiet, will you?"

Again the driver called, "Marche, Castor!"

The dogs leaped into their collars and the sled started, but from its tail rose the howls of the protesting Shot.

"Good Lord, I've got to look into this! I'll be back shortly." And, stopping his team, Guthrie walked into the murk.

He had advanced but a short distance, doubled over the ice, feeling his way with his mittens, when he stopped as a chill, like the touch of a cold wind, cut through him.

"Tide crack!" he gasped. Within a step of the gray blur of ice on which he stood, a black streak, fading into the enveloping gloom, barred his way.

"We're in the river mouth . . . among the tide cracks—Elkwan warned me! Shot—old Shot, God bless him—he knew!"

Shot's actions were clear enough now. Coming upon the open water, the alreale had returned on the boulder, barking a warning as he came. Then, as the dogs came on at a trot, Shot had catapulted into Castor, starting a fight and—stopping the sled.

Stunned, struck with remorse, Guthrie crouched on the lip of the gash in the river ice, into which dogged—all of them, would have blindly plunged but for Shot's mad attack on the team.

To have led her to this—a hideous death with the dogs drawn under by the drag of the sled. And Elkwan had warned him of the tide cracks in the river mouth. He had intended making a wide swing around the Kapiakau, but in his search for the beach, had entered the river. But Shot, staunch old warrior that he was, had through some uncanny instinct sensed their danger and taken the only method of stopping the team. Putting her trust in Guthrie, Shot had saved her. He turned back to the team, thrilled with pride in the dog who worried at his leash. The love of the man for his dog had been cemented by yet one more bond. Shot had saved her for Guthrie!

"What did you find?" she asked as he reached the sled.

"I learned that we'll have to back-track straight east," he said calmly. "Why, aren't we heading for the shore?"

"Yes, but we've got to get out of this river. When I strike the sea-ice, I'm going to circle, hit the coast, and give you some rest."

"But we ought to keep on."

"Not in this blackness. It's as thick as Flemish rain in March. I've got to lead the team," he did not add, "to watch for water ahead."

Unleashing Shot, whom he hugged as he mumbled for a space into a hairy ear, Guthrie set the alreale out as an advance patrol. He had found water once, he would find it again if they stumbled upon another tide crack. Leading Castor on a leash, he started straight east for the sea-ice.

For an hour they walked, Shot ranging ahead while Guthrie, bent forward, eyes on the ice and his compass dial, cautiously followed. Fearful of not yet having cleared the river mouth, he led his dogs for another hour, then circled into the northwest and found the shore above Kapiakau. There he fed his dogs, cut willow and alder, and with his cedar kindling got a fire going to boil the kettles.

As Joan Quarrier sat by the comforting heat in the willow thicket, Guthrie told her the story which he had kept from her while he groped through the water traps of the river mouth.

She sat with parted lips, her serious eyes suspiciously bright, as Guthrie explained why Shot had hurled himself on the team.

"And you never told me what you found when you left us?"

"Why scare you? It was bad enough as it was."

She shook her head in protest. "You call me a soldier, and treat me as a woman."

"You are a woman to me—too precious to take out on a night like this and drive into a tide crack," he replied, watching the light of the fire play on her brooding eyes.

For answer she called: "Come here, Shot—to me. I want to kiss you."

The alreale rose, stretched, yawned, and wagged his way to her. "There," I'll never forget what you did tonight. You deserve the V. C."

With a grunt, Shot thrust his nose toward her hood.

"Look out, he's trying to return the kiss," warned the man who envied his dog.

Her white teeth flashed in amusement. "You may, Shot, on the cheek, for you're a brave and gallant gentleman."

"And the other brave and gallant gentlemen—are they to be ignored? Aren't Castor and Pollux, and—other brave and gallant master, to share in your salute, oh, mon general?"

"This general deserves a bit of a hero tonight and that is Shot," she replied archly. "His devotion has been proved."

"And mine?"

She would not meet his eyes. "Oh, my friend," she parried, "we have work before us—a bitter fight for the life of a brave man. Why think of ourselves?"

In the lee of the sled, tipped on its side, its canvas cover stretched above her like a shed tent to reflect the heat of the fire, Joan Quarrier slept, warm in her robes, until waked by the cracking of the fire at dawn.

"Marche, Castor!"

As the sled started, the alreale broke into furious barking. Puzzled,

"Good morning, Healer of Wounds. The tea is almost ready; the bacon done; the bread cut. Will you wash your face and hands in the snow, and partake of the bounties set before you on these beautiful plates of tin?"

Through sleepy eyes the girl smiled up at the man who had labored for her comfort. "You are very good to your passenger, Mr. Elle. I shall recommend this line to all who contemplate a night voyage up this coast."

"We ought to make Elkwan by noon. I wonder what we'll find," he said, pouring the hot tea.

"Whatever we find, Maj. Garth Guthrie, you have squared your debt. No man could have done more for his friend."

"But I almost lost you—"

"That would have been the fortune of war."

"And the irony of fate, with Etienne and poor Galbraith waiting up there at Elkwan for two who never came."

CHAPTER XIII

At noon, that day, a lone figure stood in the snow on the clearing at Elkwan and searched the river-ice below the post. With a dubious shake of the head, Etienne returned to Old Anne and his wife, waiting in Guthrie's quarters.

"Ver' black night; hard to follow de shore. Something happen to M'sieu' Guthrie. Mebbe de woman not come wid heem."

"She come," insisted Old Anne. "She come when he ask. She come."

"Dat McDona! he ver' seek man. She breeg de med-cene ef she come. I agn' have a look at de trail."

Again Etienne stood on the cliff above the white Elkwan and watched for the moving spot on the ice, which would mark the approaching team. Disappointed, he was about to return to the women in the house when his keen eyes suddenly lit with excitement. Far on the white shell of the river seemed to move a black spot.

For a space the half-breed studied the barely distinguishable object. Then he trotted to the quarters.

"Dey come," he cried to the waiting women. "Dey turn de beeg lalan!"

When the hunkies that had traveled forty miles since daylight drew in to the cliff trail at a slow walk, Guthrie hurried to the waiting Etienne with the demand: "You got him here? He's alive?"

The half-breed nodded, then with a wide grin turned to the girl on the sled. "Allo! You welcom to Elkwan, ma'm'selle!" as he assisted her out of the robes.

"I'm mighty glad to see you, Etienne. How are Marie and the chicks, and dear Old Anne?"

"Oh, ver' fine, 'canks. You have hard ride las' night?"

Joan and Garth exchanged smiles. "We surely did," replied Guthrie. "We camped at the Kapiakau."

"At de Kapiakau?"

Guthrie's thoughts were of the man at his quarters and he did not explain. With Joan and Savanne he hurried across the clearing.

"Well?" he questioned, as the army nurse finished taking the pulse and temperature of the man whose rough bearing he had met in the room.

Without answering she placed her ear to the rough chest of the man muttering in delirium. After a space she turned to the waiting Guthrie with puzzled eyes.

"I don't quite understand. Pulse almost normal, temperature only 101, respiration not high, and yet he's developed pneumonia in one lung. I can easily hear the rales!"

"You mean he has beaten the flu?"

"I think so; he's so strong. But pneumonia—"

"It hits the big men hardest," he said gloomily.

Joan gave the patient a hypodermic of strychnia and left the room to make some gruel.

"Craig Galbraith—Laughing McDonald—Guthrie aloud. You gave all you had for Canada, and now Canada hunts you because a woman without eyes could see only your scars."

With her well-equipped medicine kit, and her wide experience with influenza and pneumonia cases in the army, Joan Quarrier gave immediate battle for the life dependent on her cure. But the problem confronting Guthrie was more complex. What was to become of Galbraith if he lived? Cameron would waste no time in taking possession of the schooner and its valuable cargo, which he would hold for the disposition of the authorities at Ottawa. But the schooner and cargo belonged to the estates of the dead men. McDonald was officially dead. He, a hunted man, could not claim it. Who, beside his wife, were his heirs? Guthrie did not know.

Then Cameron had said the police were coming shortly to the bay in search of the man who called himself McDonald. Failing to find McDonald's body, which Garth said he had seen on the boat, they would naturally come to Elkwan to talk to the man who brought the news to Albany. If Craig lived, he would be weeks in bed, recovering his strength. Where could they hide a man needing constant care if he came dog-tired without peered on the ice below the post? Etienne could be hustled into bed and bandaged to corroborate the story told to Cameron, but Galbraith—what of him? Accessory though it made him to the crime of his friend, the gray eyes of Guthrie hardened at the thought of Galbraith, V. C. Galbraith, the trench-rider, whose name was known the length of the British front, being bound down in his dire extremity. Guthrie laughed as he pictured the police attempting to take Laughing McDonald on his schooner in the fullness of his strength—McDonald Ha! Ha! and the bearded mate, who limped, with Lewis guns and the snipers' rifles that had slept with him for years.

And Joan—she had made her an accessory as well; asked her to nurse a man she knew, now, was wanted for murder. How was he to square his conscience with that? To pay his debt to Galbraith he not only had asked her to throw her reputation to the winds, but to defy the law—Joan Quarrier, who had stepped into his life to become his wife.

Joesting Crashes the Line With an Antiquated Flivver

Herbert Joesting, All American Fullback.

HERBERT JOESTING, all-American fullback, Minnesota captain and one of the rip-snortheast pile drivers that ever trooped on opposition, in his slightly calmer moments is the skipper of a collegiate flivver—one of those utterly respectable vehicles sang top and lights and bereft of paint except that used in inscribing flippant slogans.

Anyone who has seen Herb plunge naturally would suspect he would have a steam roller as his toy. Not so. The wreck to which the great fullback is devoted does everything but reflect the power of its master. It was bought by a rural mail carrier in 1912 as a rebuilt job and all trace of its actual vintage has disappeared.

"The Spirit of Owatonna," Herb calls it. And he hasn't overlooked any of the standard collegiate inscriptions: "Dis Squeals," "Why Girls Leave Home," "I Do Not Choose to Run," "Where Angels Fear to Tread," "Be Your Age," "She Who Rides and Skates Away May Ride to Skate Another Day."

Understand, though, that the terrific Mr. Joesting doesn't devote all of his waking moments to the proposition of making touchdowns and his of the football season he is a teller in the First National Bank. He has ambitions to become the world's champion log-roller. He entered several log-rolling contests in a lumber camp last summer and intends to enter the world's championship tournament next year.

The comment about Joesting being a flivver addict mustn't be construed as a dirty dig. Quite the contrary. For we are told that after every game in Minneapolis Herb leaps into the contraption and takes off for Owatonna for an over-Sunday visit with his father, his mother, his brothers and his sisters. Which isn't a bit frivolous and is a nice thing for any hero to do.

Yankees' Straight-Game Victory Is Second Made

When the Yankees defeated the Pirates for their fourth straight victory to win the world baseball championship, it was the second time in history that a club has accomplished the feat.

The other occasion was in 1914, when George Stallings' Braves defeated Connie Mack's famous old Athletics four in a row.

In the 1907 series, the first game between the Cubs and Tigers ended in a tie and then the men of Frank Chance took four in a row. In 1922 the Giants took four victories from the Yankees, but in this the second game was a tie. It was this game which the umpire called and Commissioner Landis gave all the money to charity.

California's Star

Earl Combs Finds After-Series Effects Hardest

"The after-effects of a world series game are harder on a fellow than a series itself," said Earl Combs at his home in Richmond, Ky.

"I mean," he added, "receptions, reporters and other things which take a fellow's time and allow him little rest." He was interviewed by a representative of the Lexington Leader.

"I thought we would win the series all the time but didn't think we would win in four straight games."

"I want to get clear away from the crowds this winter and just work around on the farm and take things easy," Earl said.

Bohne's Fine Record

Saunmy Bohne, who played a great game at third for Minneapolis this year, broke an American association record when he won 35 games without a slip at the hot corner. The former mark was set by Julian Wera, who won with St. Paul last year, and stood at 32 consecutive errorless games. Bohne, it is related, had a hard time getting placed with the Millers early last season, and after several whirls at shortstop, Manager Kelley placed him on third, with fine results.

Some humorous opportunities have been overlooked. It still remains to be remarked that Tunney is no poor fish and that he refused to be "canned."

All football teams are in such a terrible state just as they are about to engage their adversary—what with bruises, bolts and broken bones—it seems strange that college authorities allow them to take the field.

Prize-fight films are forbidden. Anybody by paying the price could see the fight. The shadow is more feared than the substance.

Mr. Dempsey wants to fight Mr. Tunney again. Possibly he wants baseball rules observed—three misses and you are out.

KID M'COY BUILT CORKSCREW PUNCH

Got Idea by Looking Down Into Rifle Barrel.

Kid McCoy looked down a rifle barrel one day and noticed the twisted groove in the side.

"What's that for?" he said.

"To make the bullet go faster," he was told.

The reply set McCoy to thinking. On the same principle, why wouldn't a fist hit harder if twisted just as it landed. He practiced on such a blow, a short overhand chop, twisting his fist as he struck.

The result was McCoy's historical "corkscrew punch."

A short while later McCoy met Tommy Ryan in a battle for the mid-dleweight title. McCoy, a former sparring partner of Ryan, had been much abused by the champion. McCoy sought revenge and the story of their meeting, March 2, 1896, shows that he got it.

McCoy tried out his corkscrew punch for the first time in the second round. Ryan dropped to the floor. The knockdown strangely enough, really gave McCoy a big fright. He didn't want to knock Ryan out just then; he wanted to carry him along, give him the worst beating of his life.

The fight earned for McCoy the title of "most brutal fighter in the ring." Ryan was already practically whipped but the Kid started in deliberately to cut him to pieces.

He began on the right eye and closed that. He was careful to leave the other eye open so Ryan could see to continue.

Then he cut one ear open; then he cut the other. He battered the under lip into a pulp and battered the upper lip down. He knocked out Ryan's teeth on the right side; then he knocked out those on the left side. He ground his gloves into Ryan's face and rubbed the skin off.

McCoy, wearying of his work, finally ended it in the fifteenth round.

Ruth Has .276 Batting Mark for World Series

Babe Ruth, the home run king, raised his all-time world series batting average of .273 as a result of his hit in the four contests against the Pittsburgh Pirates.

During the season, Ruth has made 27 hits in 98 times at bat. His .400, with six safeties in 15 appearances at the plate against the Pirates was the best single mark he has ever compiled.

Home runs in each of the last two games raised his total for four-baggers to 10. The Babe made his first world series appearance in 1915, as a member of the Boston Red Sox.

The Babe's record in world series competition follows:

Year	G.	A.B.	R.	H.	A.V.
1915	1	5	0	0	.000
1916	1	5	0	0	.000

German Family Holds Longevity Record

Berlin.—The record for longevity probably belongs to a German family named Luntzel. Frau Franziska Quenell, born Luntzel, who lives in Berlin, has just celebrated her hundredth birthday. Of her nine brothers and sisters three lived to be more than one hundred years old and five were past ninety when they died.

Frau Quenell, who was born on a farm, organized the first League of Patriotic Women in Germany and was its president for 25 years. She is in full possession of all her faculties, and follows current events with keen interest. The Prussian prime minister sent her an official message of felicitation on her birthday, and accompanied it with a piece of porcelain from the state porcelain works as a gift of the government.

It has been often said that Clemenceau is anti-religious. He is merely nonreligious. Even in the worst days of the fight between the radical extremists and the church authorities, when the separation of church and state was the big problem in France, Clemenceau repeated time and again that there must be no attempt to suppress religion or to persecute anybody for religious beliefs.

"Governments," he declared in the chamber, "can do nothing against beliefs. I have been asked if we want to destroy religion. Well, messieurs les deputes, here is my reply: We do not want to, we could not if we would, destroy a single belief in a single conscience."

In one of his books, "Le Grand Pan," he takes up the problem of the inspiring principle of mankind. He declares in it that action is the principle, action is the means, action is the goal.

Clemenceau has followed that principle all his life. In spite of his years he has his half hour of physical training every day. In Paris he has an instructor. Here he does it alone.

The Limitations of Education

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

THE summer following my junior year in college I developed physical strength and a very limited balance in the bank by doing manual labor in the farming community in which I had grown up. We were thrashing for Cornelius O'Donnell down in the Dutch flats. Cornelius was a good farmer and a keen judge of human nature. He had known me almost from infancy, and I am afraid thought it a waste of time and money for me to put so many years in at college.

"How long you been in college?" he asked me.

"Three years," I said. "I've got a year more."

"I suppose there won't be anything you don't know or can't do by the end of that time," he remarked.

Wilbur Says Radio Saved 19,000 Lives

Washington.—Radio made it possible for the United States to avoid serious conflicts in two countries—China and Nicaragua—where its armed forces were protecting Americans, Secretary Wilbur of the navy said in an address recently before the telephone and telegraph sections of the American Railway association.

Through radio communication, decisions of leaders of the American forces in those countries could be placed before the President and his cabinet, he said, and in a few moments the latter's instructions could be sent back to the foreign countries.

He added that if it had not been for the radio and airplanes in the Mississippi flood 19,000 lives would have been lost.

French "Tiger" in Twilight of Life

St. Vincent-Sur-Jard, France.—Whether he is in his Paris home in the Rue Franklin or in his summer abode on this windswept Vendean shore, Georges Clemenceau, who has just passed his eighty-sixth birthday, spends most of his time writing and thinking. He invariably refuses to talk politics, although they occupied the biggest part of his active life. What does he write?

He is engaged now, and has been for several years, on a volume or series of volumes which are understood to resume his outlook on life and its problems. But they are not to be published until after his death and the "Tiger" has not revealed anything of their content. Therefore it is only by a reference to his published books that one can obtain any adequate idea of the principles on which he has guided his career.

It is not a difficult task because whatever Clemenceau wrote is marked by simplicity of thought and presentation, however complex the problems involved. In philosophy he is a disciple of the Stoics. He has taken for himself the phrase of Spinoza: "Nothing may be called perfect or imperfect; everything happens in conformity with an eternal natural order."

It was after his political eclipse in 1894 that Clemenceau had an opportunity to develop his extraordinary talent as a writer. In his newspaper La Justice he touched on every phase of human activity and a year later published in a volume entitled "La Melee Sociale" (The Social Conflict), practically all his daily articles arranged in logical order. The leit-motif of all is the "struggle for existence."

He paints realistic pictures of human suffering, long hours in factories, poverty, vice, brutality and pity side by side, prostitution, exploitation, injustice of a hundred kinds.

He does not apportion praise or blame. He merely tells what he has seen and asks only that men of understanding work with all their power to make the world better.

"What he asks," will come after this universe? How, if ever, will the primal nebula be reformed? In how many billion years? With what new power of life? All hypotheses, I offer you nothing, not feeling that I am responsible for anything in the universal scheme of things."

Sometimes Clemenceau seems to be a socialist, as in fact he proclaimed himself at the opening of his parliamentary career. This, in another article of "La Melee Sociale," he declares that "the end toward which nature seems to be striving is socialism, which will fix by law respect for all, the rule of justice by association." But in the next moment he proclaims

After all, skepticism is his dominant trait. In his daily life as in his writings, he has lived all his life in close

Indian Long Past Century of Life

Los Angeles, Calif.—Thirty years before the Stars and Stripes were adopted as the American standard in the midst of the War of Independence, a man who still lives first saw the light of the sun, if Indian gossip be true.

The man is Captain Sam, or Sam Fish, whose cabin is in the Indian village near June lake in the high Sierras.

No one knows how old is Captain Sam. Residents of the region affirm he is the oldest man in California. Perhaps the oldest in the world.

Captain Sam does not say. What matters less, when so many have passed over his head?

Tribal tales indicate that Captain Sam is one hundred and eighty years of age. White men who scout this figure admit it is not improbable he has seen 145 winters.

There are more than one hundred Indians in Captain Sam's family. These far along in years recall tales he once told at camp fires, years ago. Nowadays, white men strive in vain to have him impart his memories of the past.

The stories of his relatives indicate that Captain Sam was a grown man, a leader of his tribe, when the Donner party went through the upper Owens valley nearly a century ago.

This was the first party of whites to traverse the region. Relatives of Captain Sam recall the accounts he gave them of his astonishment at seeing white men and women for the first time in his adventurous life. Often Captain Sam sits in the sun by his cabin door, holding in his arms his latest descendant, a papoose of three months. He has lost track of the generations of his family. The purpose is believed to be his great-great-great-grandson.

Yearly the Putes and other tribes hold a four-day festival of sports and tribal dances at June lake. Nowadays, Captain Sam is carried thither on a birch litter, and is honored with revivals of ancient ceremonies.

Each year when the festival is completed—this year it was held the first four days of July—the celebrators wonder if Captain Sam will be with them when the next fete comes around.
